

The last CW message was sent by the Coast Guard showing that it was the ending of the need for CW and all the military stopped training in Morse Code, but within the year all military's (Army,Navy,etc) restarted their schools again realizing their need for the code requirments. And as far as the handycapped, there is allready waver's and adjustments that have been made to accomadate any problem that arises. And my wife and I and all the VE's that are on several teams that we know, have stated that there is no Burden on any of them doing the CW tests. If it is such a burden for the NCVEC's to administer tests they need to turn in their VE badges.
